GRAIN COOPERATIVE
PROJECT DEVELOPMENT SYSTEM

The Client

system

Formed in the 1930's CBH Group is a cooperative of grain growers which owns and operates a network of grain storage and handling facilities and downstream processing. CBH markets grain and grain products for its growers

The Assignment

CBH was entering a phase of modernisation of aging assets and needed a logical but rigorous system for advancing its project portfolio to return best value for growers.

The Challenge

- A long established operation with diverse operations entering an unparalleled phase of development and asset renewal
- Conceive and document a project development system which ensured the best value for the growers' investment
- Process must be rigorous and demonstrably suitable for the application
- Ensure all stakeholders are properly heard
- Process must be able to withstand challenge from all quarters
- Avoid excess words

The Outcome

- A staged process for documentation and review of the project development system was implemented
- Stakeholder inputs were obtained through a wide range of interviews
- The system was written, reviewed and approved, and
- Rolled out to the wide range of users and stakeholders through multiple direct briefings
- 1 year into implementation, Flagstaff conducted an audit to assess system effectiveness. There were some improvement initiatives, but in general there was wide buy in
